COMFORT FOR GOD'S PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 40:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Love for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Secret of True Happiness.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of True Comfort.

I. God's Message of Comfort (vv. 1, 2).

1. It was addressed to Isaiah and his successors in office (v. 1).

He, as God's spokesman, was to make known the very heart of God to the people who were in great need of comfort. They were in a strange land, in captivity because of their sins. In spite of their apostasy from God—the breaking of their covenant with Him—His favor was about to return.

2. The mutual relation of God and His people (v. 1).

This is expressed in the phrases "my people" and "your God." The believer belongs to God, and God belongs to him. How blessed it is to be thus related to Him. Observe, this was said concerning a people who had sinned and backslidden.

3. Pardon received (v. 2).

In spite of their gross iniquity, their pardon was declared. The receiving of double at the Lord's hands does not mean that there had been undue infliction of punishment, but that the divine pardon exceeded the guilt. The period of the captivity was at an end. Their blessing was not through their own merit, but was to be realized through the sin offering of Jehovah.

II. The Preparation Required (vv 3-5).

In order to secure the salvation which was to be theirs through the vicarious offering of Jehovah, it was necessary that certain preparation should be made. Observe:

1. The voice in the wilderness (v. 3)

This voice was that of John the Baptist, and actually was heard at the time of the coming of Jesus Christ (Matt. 3:1-3).

2. Prepare ye the way of the Lord (v. 3). It was the custom on state occasions for some one to go in advance of the king or ruler and make preparation for his coming. This prepration centered of the actual removal of all hills, the elevation of valleys and the straightening of crooked places, so that the monarch could move forward with ease and facility. In its moral bearing, the meaning is that preparation for the coming of the Lord into the hearts and lives of the people consists of the subjugation of pride and selfish ambition, and the straightening of the crooked and perverse things of this life.

3. The glory of the Lord revealed (v. 5).

When there is proper preparation of heart, the Lord will enter, and His glory will be revealed in the life. It primarily refers to the manifestation of the divine glory in the person of the Messiah.

III. The Frailty of Man in Contrast With God's Word (vv. 6-8).

"All flesh is grass and all the good thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, because the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it. Surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever." Just as the blast of the hot wind scorches the grass and destroys the crops, so everything loved and prized by the natural man will wither and die under the blast of God's judgment, but His Word shall stand forever. The Word of God abides from age to age with perennial freshness. God's promise of ultimate triumph should steady us because no matter through what stress and strain we may be called to pass, when the Lord comes there will be victory.

IV. The Lord God Coming to Zion (vv. 9-11).

1. Behold Your God. (v. 9).

When He comes to Zion there will be no need of fear. This blessed truth can be proclaimed aloud to the cities of Judah.

2. The Lord God will come with a strong hand. (v. 10).

The hope of the world is in the coming of Jesus Christ in power and great glory to establish His blessed rule over the earth. Righteousness and peace can come only with the Messianic rule.

3. He shall feed His flock like a shepherd (v. 11).

The Good Shepherd will search out and provide for His own.

Always Content

We shall be made truly wise if we be made content; content, too, no only with what we understand, but content with what we do not understand—the habit of mind which theologians call, and rightly, faith in God.—Charles Kingsley.

That We May Read Aright

God sometimes washes the eyes of his children with tears in order that they may rend aright His providences and His commandments.—T. L. Cuyler.

Degrees in Music

The musical degrees most frequently conferred in English-speaking countries for work in music are Mus. B.—Bachelor of Music—and Mus. D.—Doctor of Music. Less frequently the degree Mus. M.—Master of Music—is granted. In Germany the Ph. D. degree is granted instead of Mus. D., thus placing specialized work in music on a par with other studies.

Home Great Force

Home is the pole-star of life on this planet. It is a universal, ever-present force.—Irving Batchelor.

GEORGIANS ENACT OLD GOLD RUSH

See Conquest for Yellow Metal in Hills.

Dahlonega, Ga.—They are digging for gold again in the hills around Dahlonega, scene of a famous rush early in the Nineteenth century.

Men are swinging picks and shovels, searching for the metal that lured 2,000 fortune seekers, frenzied miners, over rugged mountain paths to this town, sixteen miles from a railroad, when news of the big strike in 1829 went around the world.

Gold mining around Dahlonega has been lagging since the World war, when increased wages and operating costs cut into the profits.

The Civil war resulted in the shutting down here of a branch of the United States mint in 1861, after it had coined 1,281,784 pieces, valued at $6,115,509, in its twenty-four years of operation. D. S. W. McCallie, state geologist, says while the coinage of the mint was only slightly above $6,000,000, that the mountains around Dahlonega have produced at least $10,000,000 in gold. The mint was not established here until 1838, about ten years after the first gold was found.

Two companies, operating ten or more mines, have started operations here on a modest scale. There is nothing of a frenzy about Dahlonega's gold digging this time. Doctor McCallie says he believes the mines can be made to pay if the work is done by trained geologists and mining engineers. He calls attention to the fact that the profits from the Dahlonega gold mines had greatly dwindled when the first gold was found in California in 1848.

Dahlonega residents do not anticipate a new gold rush. William Benjamin Franklin Townsend, quaint old editor of the town's weekly newspaper, The Nugget, says he believes there is gold in the mountains "if you know where and how to find it."

When the government abandoned the Dahlonega mint the buildings and grounds were given to the state for the North Georgia Agricultural college. A number of buildings, remininent of gold-mining boom days, still stand.

Table Salt Substitute for Ailing Is Discovered

Atlantic City, N. J.—Dr. John C. Krantz, Jr., chemist and lecturer at Johns Hopkins hospital, announced at a joint meeting of the state boards of pharmacy and delegates from the faculties of colleges of pharmacy of the East, the discovery of Eka salt, a substitute for table salt for the use of those afflicted with high blood pressure, Bright's disease and dropsy.

Eka salt is a sodium salt of malic acid. Malic acid is obtained from apples. It ratifies the craving for salt, according to Doctor Krantz, and its reaction in the body is quite different from that of common salt.

"The ordinary table salt," he said, "tends to create water in the body. The new sodium salt of the acid is formed up or metabolized in the body and serves as an alkali-producing food and tends to counteract acidosis. Because it is burned up or metabolized, it does not tax the kidneys."

Old Yankee Clipper Anchors in Thames

London.—Ancient galleons and American clippers vie for honors in an exhibition of old ships models now drawing crowds of children—and grown ups, too—to the Festival Ship, a beautiful old three-masted vessel which, under American auspices, has been anchored in the Thames as a clubhouse.

Among the most interesting exhibits is a model, made in 1/16 of actual size, of the clipper of the 16-gun corvette type. An Elizabethan galleon nearby makes a striking contrast. Other favorite models are an Italian felucca such as used to fight the Moorish pirates, a two-decker fighting ship of the Nelson type and a fine model of a Norwegian fruit carrier.

Folding Cells

New York.—Livingston Welch, lieterateur and musician, has invented a folding cello that can be put in a suitcase.

Indian Factions in Row Over Necklace

Poncha City, Okla.—Charles H. Burke, Indian commissioner, has been called to referee the controversy between two prominent Otoe Indian families over the ownership of a bear claw necklace.

The necklace has been an adornment of the head chief for several generations. It was originally the property of Chief Two Strike in Nebraska and later adorned Two Kilter, Medicine Horse and others.

After the tribe had been moved to its reservation near here the necklace came into the possession of Medicine Horse, the tribal chief but not a lineal descendant of Chief Two Strike. Members of the Green family, Chief Two Strike's descendants, contend the necklace belongs to them. The Medicine Horse faction insist the necklace is the property of the chief and serves in lieu of a crown.

CONVICT SCULPTOR CARVES IN HIS CELL

War Veteran and College Man Shows Talent.

Raleigh, N. C.—Jack Landingham, a veteran of the World war and a college man, convicted in Buncombe county of forgery and false pretense, and sentenced to serve a total from ten to twelve years, is an artist of merit, with a leaning toward sculpture.

The youth's first work was a model of Amelia Earhart made from a newspaper photograph. The figure was carved out of concrete. The young sculptor contracted a bone felon on his hand from working so hard a surface, but he created a striking likeness of the young aviatrix.

Officials saw the statue of the girl. It is the policy of the institution to encourage the prisoners to learn useful trades. Superintendent George Ross Fou made Landingham a present of a few sacks of plaster of paris, and gave his permission to continue his artistic pursuits outside his working hours.

A newspaper likeness of "The Happy Warrior," Alfred E. Smith, on his tour through the South, caught the eye of the young artist, and straightway the Democratic candidate in a characteristic pose. It is one of the more striking figures that the young man has accomplished to date.

When Landingham lays down his pick wrench at the end of a day of hard work, he carefully lifts a wet tow sack, beneath which is a mass of moistened plaster of paris and a hunk of modeling clay. This material the youth carries to his cell.

In his cell after supper he takes a picture and, using it as a model, adds the finishing touches to his clay outline. He places the model above the lump of plaster and starts on his masterpiece. His tools are a blunt pocket knife, a five-inch piece of steel spring, a whet stone and a small sponge.

Landingham's most recent product is a lion. At times he sat far into the night perfecting it. He has the permission of the prison authorities to keep late hours.

Landingham has carved a very good likeness of Edwin Poe, eldest son of the prison superintendent. He has also se perfected busts of the other Poe children, and one of the youngest son of Dr. J. H. Norman. Another striking example of his work is a copy of the "Dying Gladiator."

Jack Laudingham was born in Knoxville, Tenn., thirty-two years ago. He attended the University of Tennessee and the Rice Institute in Texas. Then the war started, and young Landingham was sent overseas. He carries seven wounds in his body as the result of contact with a German machine gun nest. His companions on that adventure are dead.

He came back to this country jobless and penniless. He accepted a position with an advertising outfit—smart fellows who sold their scheme to a community and then went their way. Landingham later began business for himself.

Overlooked Formality.

He worked various cities in the West before entering North Carolina. He invaded Asheville, where there is to operation no ordinance that requires each advertising solicitor to pay a fee of $80. Landingham started business without attending to this formality.

The Merchants' association got behind him. He had by this time invested all his money in the proposition and had none left with which to pay the fee. An automobile dealer backed out of his contract and took his license off the car. Half the merchants declined to pay a fee part, while the other half insisted that he carry out his contract.

The merchants threatened to have him arrested on a charge of fraud, but finally became ashamed and jumped the town. The merchants who had bit on the scheme swore out warrants for his arrest. He thought the fact he ran away would convict him, so he evaded guilty.

Behind it all is an unrequited love affair of his college days—a romance which resulted in the other man winning the girl while Jack fought the Huns. Then came wasteful years over the world to forget memories of brown eyes and laughing lips; to keep his hands from modeling figures of her who first inspired him; to forget the bloody battle fields of France—wondering that landed him finally behind prison walls.

19 Skeletons Dug Up in Old Berlin Church

Berlin.—In the course of renovating the Klosterkirche, the oldest church of Berlin, the workmen under their ecclesiastical expert, Doctor Steinberger, discovered a subterranean vault filled with 18 skeletons of women that were identified as remains of the Eighteenth century. Six skeletons were exhumed and buried elsewhere.

Within the last two centuries the Klosterkirche, built during the latter part of the Thirteenth century, has repeatedly proved a treasure trove for historical relics. Only last year a two-hundred-pound sepulcher was unearthed, though neither in that nor in the present burial place were any objects of art value found.

Gently Tapping

Rochester, N. Y.—There was an insistent tapping, as of some one gently rapping, at Mrs. George Rasker's window. It was not a black raven, but a white carrier pigeon, friendly and an utter stranger.

Famous Botanic Gardens

The Royal Botanic gardens of Kew (Surrey, Eng.) originated in the exotic garden formed by Lord Capel, 5 whom the estate belonged in the late Seventeenth and early Eighteenth centuries in 1840 the gardens were adopted as a national establishment and now they consist of 75 acres, with the arboretum adjoining extending 270 acres.

"Pins and Needles"

"Pins and needles" are caused by the free circulation of the blood being hindered in some way. When the pressure is eased the heldup blood rushes on and fills the sides of the veins. That causes the tingling.

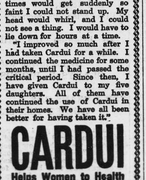
Middle Age Troubles



"About twenty years ago, my health was bad," says Mrs. Mat Howard, of Terrell, Texas. "I was passing through a critical time in my life, and I suffered a great deal. I was not at all strong and my nerves got all upset. I had lost flashes, and sometimes would get suddenly so faint I could not stand up. My head would whirl, and I could not see a thing. I would have to lie down for hours at a time. "I improved so much after I had taken Cardui for a while. I continued the medicine for some months, until I had passed the critical period. Since then, I have given Cardui to my five daughters. All of them have continued the use of Cardui in their homes. We have all been better for having taken it."

Hoover Will Give Jobs Only to Those Who Prove Their Fitness.

A RIGID scrutiny of all applicants for federal appointments is to be the policy of the present administration. President Hoover has announced in no uncertain terms that the future every applicant for office in the government service must demonstrate his fitness for the job. His first move in this direction is the republication of the present Republican organization in Mississippi, South Carolina and Georgia, on the grounds of irresponsibility and corruption, and the demand that they be replaced by Republican leaders possessing integrity and the confidence of their communities. In Texas, Alabama, Florida and some other states, where the existing leadership has fallen into disrepute, the President announced that these leaders would be compelled to divide authority with advisory committees acceptable to the administration.

The President's action is based on the report of the Brookhart committee of the senate which made an investigation into the sale of federal appointments and other political corruption in that region.

This important announcement by the President was brought out by questions at the press conference at the White House. He said:

"Recommendations of those in recommendations for federal office, particularly in some parts of the states of South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, under which some of the federal departments, mainly the post office, were misled in appointments, obviously ought to be changed. The old organizations in those states to command the confidence of the administration, although many members of these organizations are not subject to criticism. But such conditions are intolerable to public service, are repugnant to the ideals and purposes of the Republican party, are unjust to the people of the South and must be ended.

"The duty of reorganization, so as to correct these conditions, rests with the people of those states, and all efforts to that end will receive the hearty co-operation of the administration. If these three states are unable to initiate such correction through the leadership of men who will command confidence and protect the public service, the different federal departments will be compelled to adopt other methods to secure advice as to the selection of federal employees.

"In other states, including Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Florida, the Republican leadership has in recent times shown increasing strength and is now rendering able and conscientious service in maintaining wholesome organization, under whose advice the appointments to public office have steadily improved and commended themselves to the citizens of those states with increased confidence in the party."

A VERITABLE earthquake hit the stock market early in the week when call money went skyward. The first jump to 14 per cent caused a first-class money scare in Wall street. Stocks came roaring down with a crash. Frightened traders sold for any price they could get, almost demoralizing the market. There was no sustained support, the rich men's stocks giving the most ground and the standard issues crumbling along with the good and the bad.

When call money later reached 20 per cent, the highest since 1920, record trading and bank accounts went smash. Odd lot dabblers and the heavy plungers dumped their holdings overboard when they could no longer wait for the rally which came, but came too late. The market never was so violent. Later, when bargain hunters, investment trusts and institutions began buying, prices began the upward swing and recovered some of the ground lost.

Toward the end of the week the bulls recovered control of the market when announcement came that the emergency was not to be continued. Money eased to 15 per cent and was in adequate supply. New York banks kept the market unhampered as to any stringency in funds. The National City bank sent $25,000,000 over to the exchange to be loaned at rates from 16 to 20 per cent. J. P. Morgan sent over $10,000,000. This brought some cheer to the situation. Short covering got under way and prices reacted buoyantly.

Under the urging of the federal reserve board the strings about the credit supply have for some time been drawing tighter and tighter. It is the aim of the board to bring about a diversion of the country's money from speculative markets to normal channels of business. Should the week's mammoth liquidation serve its purpose, bankers anticipate a gradual relaxation of the purse strings.

One result of the market upset was that several houses sent out notices to their customers that hereafter all margins would be 50 per cent. Brokerage firms admitted that if the federal reserve policy was continued and if the banks persisted in refusing to accept all kinds of securities and continued marching down the loaning rates, all margins in the street would have to be 50 per cent to ease the strain on the brokers.

THE arrival in Washington of Henry L. Stimson, former governor general of the Philippines, to take up his new duties as secretary of state, completes President Hoover's cabinet. Secretary Stimson immediately plunged into the work of familiarizing himself with pending problems and the duties of the office. Former Secretary Kellogg remained with him for a few days to give what assistance was necessary.

The new secretary of state finds himself confronted with several matters of high importance such as American participation in the arms parley at Geneva, the Mexican revolution, American adherence to the World court on the basis of the Root substitute for the senate's reservations, the German reparations question, and necessary changes in the diplomatic corps.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has appointed Col. Henry L. Gilchrist, medical corps, to succeed Maj. Gen. Amos E. Fries as chief of the chemical warfare service, and Col. Stephen O. Fuqua to succeed Maj. Gen. Robert E. Allen as chief of Infantry. Both General Fries and General Allen, whose terms of office have expired, will revert to their regular rank of colonel, but both will be eligible to retirement as major general on application or because of age limit.

The appointments of Colonels Gilchrist and Fuqua, who will rank as major generals during their four-year terms, was in accordance with the rotation policy adopted, but not always followed, during the last administration, and which was indorsed as "sound and in the interests of good administration" by Secretary of War Good.

ANOTHER airplane disaster has taken its toll of those who venture to the air. A pilot and three passengers were killed when the Ryan monoplane in which they were flying from Columbus to New York crashed into a tree in a dense fog on South mountain between Colebrook and Mount Greylock, Pa. Witnesses said that when the plane hit the tree it wavered, then rose slightly, turned over on its side, and crashed into the dense thicket. All of the men were dead when workmen from the Pennsylvania National Guard encampment grounds nearby reached the scene. It is believed the pilot lost his way in the fog and was trying to get his bearings over the military reservation when the accident happened.

THE preliminary work of the reparations commission in Paris has been completed and the conference has settled down to a discussion of the actual problem of figures. Chairman Owen D. Young said: "The work of the committee has reached a point where we must consider figures before proceeding further in order to fit them into the scheme already written down. The only problem facing us is the number of annuities and the amount each year."

It is generally admitted that the total indebtedness of Germany in the neighborhood of ten billions of dollars, but it remains to be figured out at the present value through the discount rate over the number of years it runs. The Germans stand for 37 years and the French insist on 58 years.
